

2025 Asia Pacific Congress on Public Health

(November 29 – 30, Boao, Hainan, China)

Call for Abstracts

About the Conference:

To foster collaboration and advance global public health in the Asia-Pacific region, the Asia-Pacific Region Liaison Office (APRLO) of the World Federation of Public Health Associations (WFPHA), along with the Chinese Preventive Medicine Association (CPMA) and the Public Health Association of New Zealand (PHANZ), plans to hold the 2025 Asia Pacific Congress on Public Health (APCPH) in Boao, Hainan, China from November 29 to 30, 2025. The Congress was first established in 2009 with the strong support of WFPHA, and six previous APCPHs have been successfully organized in Beijing, Japan, Bali, Nha Trang, Seoul and Thailand.

The theme of the 2025 Asia-Pacific Conference on Public Health (APCPH) is “Addressing Diverse Challenges, Building a Healthy Asia-Pacific: Equity, Resilience, Innovation.” This theme reflects a critical global priority, as exemplified by the COVID-19 pandemic. Over the past years, this unprecedented public health crisis has exposed systemic vulnerabilities in national and regional health systems worldwide. Strengthening multi-disease prevention and control to safeguard global health security remains a long-term challenge for the international community. As the operating body of the WFPHA Asia-Pacific Regional Liaison Office, the CPMA is committed to enhancing regional public health collaboration. Together with public health organizations across the Asia-Pacific, we will advance the vision of “Building a Global Community of Health for All.”
